A Wandering Aramaean

To understand the first reading of today’s Mass we need to go back into the ancient history of the Israelite people.

The passage in which the Israelite people make this declaration is to be said at the feast of the “First-fruits”; the authentic Harvest Festival that comes as an act of thanksgiving at the beginning of the harvest season, not at the end. The spirit of this is in marked contrast with our experience of harvest festivals that are celebrated at the end of the harvest season.

When the first sheaf is cut, the offering must be made of that sheaf; the field is left and a journey must be made to the place where God was perceived to dwell — the Tabernacle — and the offering made. Only then could the rest of the harvest be reaped.

The wandering Aramaean was the patriarch Jacob, and we read his story in Genesis, from chapters 25 to 49. Aram was a grandson of Noah, and his family were settled in the land we now call Syria. Abraham was descended from Aram, hence his family are described as “Aramaean”.

Abraham’s grandson Jacob was the younger of twins, Esau was their father’s favourite, and Jacob was the favourite of their mother. Although Esau was the elder, he sold his birthright to Jacob, and later is cheated out of the last blessing of their father. As a result, Jacob fled and began his wanderings, first working for his kinsman Laban, during which he acquired wives and twelve sons (as well as at least one daughter, Dinah). Esau became the ancestor of the Edomites.

One of the best-known Edomites was King Herod (who tried to kill the infant Jesus, and massacred the Holy Innocents). It is a telling indication of the depths to which the Jewish state has fallen that not only was it an occupied province of the Roman Empire but that it was ruled by a descendant of Esau. Rebekah had been told by God before her twins were born that Jacob would rule over Esau, but now the offspring of Esau was ruling over the descendants of Jacob.

One of the sons of Jacob was Joseph; he was his father’s favourite, and the story of how he went to Egypt is well-known (Genesis 37), and how there was then a great famine, which resulted in the whole family settling in Egypt where there was food, but where they eventually became enslaved.

Having been wealthy, within a few years they were reduced to slavery in a foreign land. (This sequence of events would be repeated centuries later with the exile to Babylon.)

From nothing, God brought them out of Egypt, and led them to the “promised Land” where they again became a powerful and prosperous nation.

Recognising that God had brought them “with mighty hand and outstretched arm” into a land “where milk and honey flow”, they acknowledge their complete dependence on God, and offer to him the first-fruits of their produce each year.

It is significant that this is all told very personally. “My father” demonstrates a direct family connection, and from the description “he became a nation”, the very next sentence says: “The Egyptians ill-treated us”. From then on in the story, it could be the present generation, just as it is this year’s harvest.

There is a further parallel to notice: the reason why the sons of Jacob went to Egypt was because of famine — because of the failure of the harvest. This statement is made at the beginning of the harvest season.

This was not the end of the obligation regarding the harvest, and Deuteronomy 26 goes on to speak of the requirement as well as to support the organised religion (the Levites), also to support resident foreigners, orphans and widows.

Part of the Jewish Law says: “When a foreigner resides with you in your land, you shall not oppress him. The foreigner who resides with you shall be to you as the citizen among you. You shall love him as yourself, for you were foreigners in the land of Egypt.” (Leviticus 19:33-34). Sadly, in our present age in which the scourge of nationalism is growing, we are seeing so many instances of this divine command being ignored; in this country the rise of both anti-Semitism and Islamophobia as well as a more general xenophobia expressed as “Britain for the British”; a concept which totally flies in the face of God’s command.

The care of “widows and orphans” can be expanded into a more general care of the poor. This obligation clearly rests with us just as it did with the Israelites, and our regular gifts to CAFOD and the Hope Centre are part of our recognition of this requirement. Many people do make regular contributions throughout the year, but twice a year CAFOD encourage us to make a special effort. For those who are hungry every day, just twice a year does seem to be somewhat inadequate.

Can we manage to skip one meal every week, and give what we have saved to CAFOD? Please take a CAFOD envelope every week and put it in the collection bag each Sunday with the value of the meal you have missed, and give it so that someone can have food at all.

It is helpful for us to refer to the Latin original text to fully appreciate the full meaning of this prayer. That which is translated as “the yearly observance of Lent” misses two important concepts; the Latin speaks of “exercitia”, exercises and “sacramenti”, literally mystery.

The idea of mystery links to the “riches hidden in Christ”, and the exercises are to help us to “grow in understanding.

Grant, almighty God,
through the yearly observance of Lent,
that we may grow in understanding of the riches hidden in Christ and by worthy conduct pursue their effects.

Through our Lord Jesus Christ, your Son who lives and reigns with you in the unity of the Holy Spirit, one God, for ever and ever. Amen.

However this is not merely an exercise which will help our knowledge of Christ. A purpose is made clear; that we may have “worthy conduct”.

The reality of our faith is revealed in the conduct of our lives, as St James makes abundantly clear: “Be doers of the word and not merely hearers who deceive themselves.” (James 1:22)

The mystery of the riches hidden in Christ are both Sacramental and found in our exercise of charity in our daily life.

Scripture Readings 10th March 2019, 1st Sunday in Lent, Year C

Deuteronomy, the “second law”, repeats the law given on Sinai. It describes events just before the Israelites crossed the Jordan from the desert into the promised land. In today’s reading Moses uses an ancient formula to prescribe how the first fruits of the harvest are to be offered in gratitude for the gifts God has given to a landless people. As with our offerings during Mass, the priest’s role is to begin the celebration by setting the offerings “before the Lord your God”.

The psalm describes benefits of trusting in God: protection from evils and terrors as God goes with us in our distress.

Paul has lamented to the Romans that the works and rituals of the Mosaic Law did not bring Israel righteousness, and they cannot justify, that is make us right with God. Everyone can be saved, but only by confessing faith in God from their heart.

In Luke’s gospel we hear how, after his baptism, Jesus was tempted in the desert. The devil’s power is real. Perhaps Jesus was often tempted during his ministry to use lavish gifts, force or exhibitions of supernatural power to convince people. But Jesus remained faithful to his Father. The only way to God is by service and suffering. The devil is routed for now, but will return during Jesus’ passion.

Psalm Response: Be with me, O Lord, in my distress.

(Deut 26:4-10; Psalm 90 (91); Romans 10:8-13; Luke 4:1-13)

News from CAFOD

When Mahinur moved into her new home, she was elated. She had worked for months digging foundations for a local road and had saved £300 – enough to buy a plot of land. 40 years old and a fisherwoman by trade, a first home on the edge of a river was the perfect location. What Mahinur didn’t know was that one year later, the river would run dry.

The drought came suddenly. By March 2018, not a drop of water remained. Mahinur left her boat and simply walked across the riverbed. The fish lay rotting around her. Soon there was heavy rainfall and the river filled again but there were still no fish.

Balancing the heavy wooden stave of the fishing net on her shoulder, she carries it to the riverbank. Then, fully clothed, she climbs into the river. For the next 20 minutes, she drags the net back and forth, occasionally reaching out a hand to steady herself against the current.

Just her head protrudes from the water. When she climbs out, she silently shakes out the contents of the net – one eel the size of a pencil, two fish no bigger than a penny, and one larger fish. The fish flips around as she drops it in the metal bowl. It’s barely two mouthfuls.

There should be fish in the river now — it’s the right time of year - but there’s nothing. Fish are Mahinur’s only source of food, and selling her catch her only source of money. She frequently forgoes meals so her 12-year-old son can eat.

He suffers from a learning disability he’s had since birth. The right side of his body is also weakened by a kind of partial paralysis. No one seems exactly sure why. His father has a physical disability too, and walks with difficulty using crutches. It explains why Mahinur takes responsibility for the household.
